We live each day—thinking, dreaming, planning, wanting, working, involved in the ever-present cycle of human relationships . . . we are one with another—communication never ceasing . . . we are the next in line, waiting for our turn to be a bright spot in the paths of others—to matter . . . we go through the same things day after day, but the coincidences, the expressions, the basic trials
 are different . . . we care about another,
 about an activity, a special moment, a responsibility—but why do we care . . .
 what is happening to us . . . wanting something, we work for it—but why does it matter . . . school—what does it involve—where is the end of it all . . .
 is it the people, the thought, the knowledge—or is it just something to get over . . . there is a place for everyone—each of us belongs to something—but why do we throw ourselves into the maze of organizations . . . learning to believe in things, we support our beliefs—
 but is it worth it . . . always—excitement,
 challenge, expectation keep drumming
 in our minds . . . we are here—but why are we here . . . what's it all about . . .

 Best wishes to a

 Aunt & Uncle
 Marilyn

We began unsteadily—testing the unfamiliar—hoping but hesitating . . . becoming more sure of ourselves we learned to seek the significant—the deeper meanings of relations . . . on our own—free to wonder, free to believe . . .

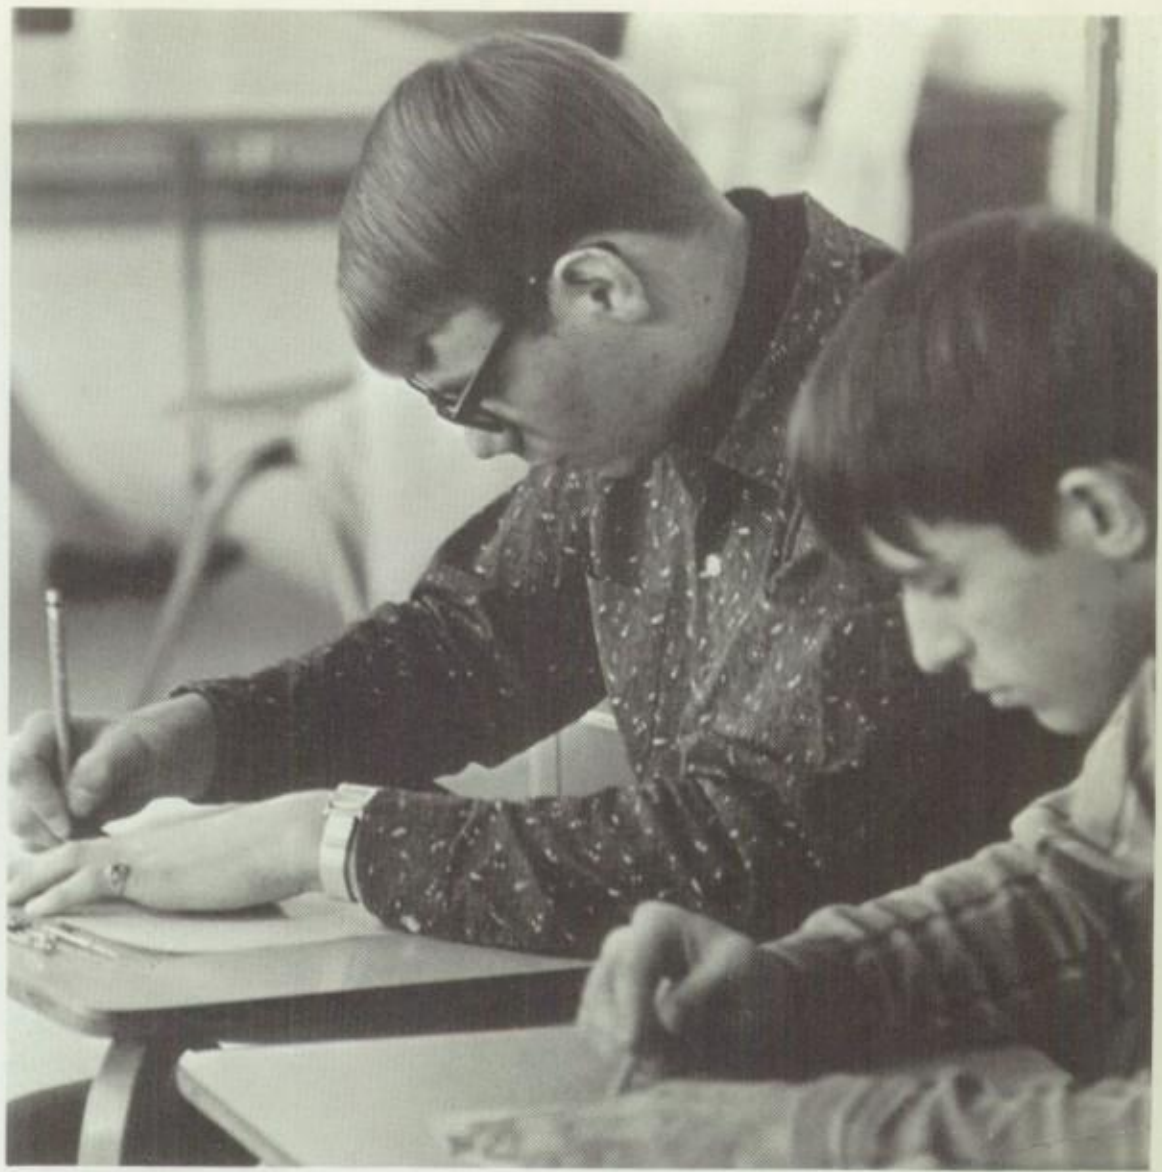

Becoming the familiar—these rooms,
these people, these settled ways . . . all
were a part of us . . .

The group—Pioneers—wanting to be top and making it . . . we were number one . . . spirit from within created the desire . . . a little bit more . . .

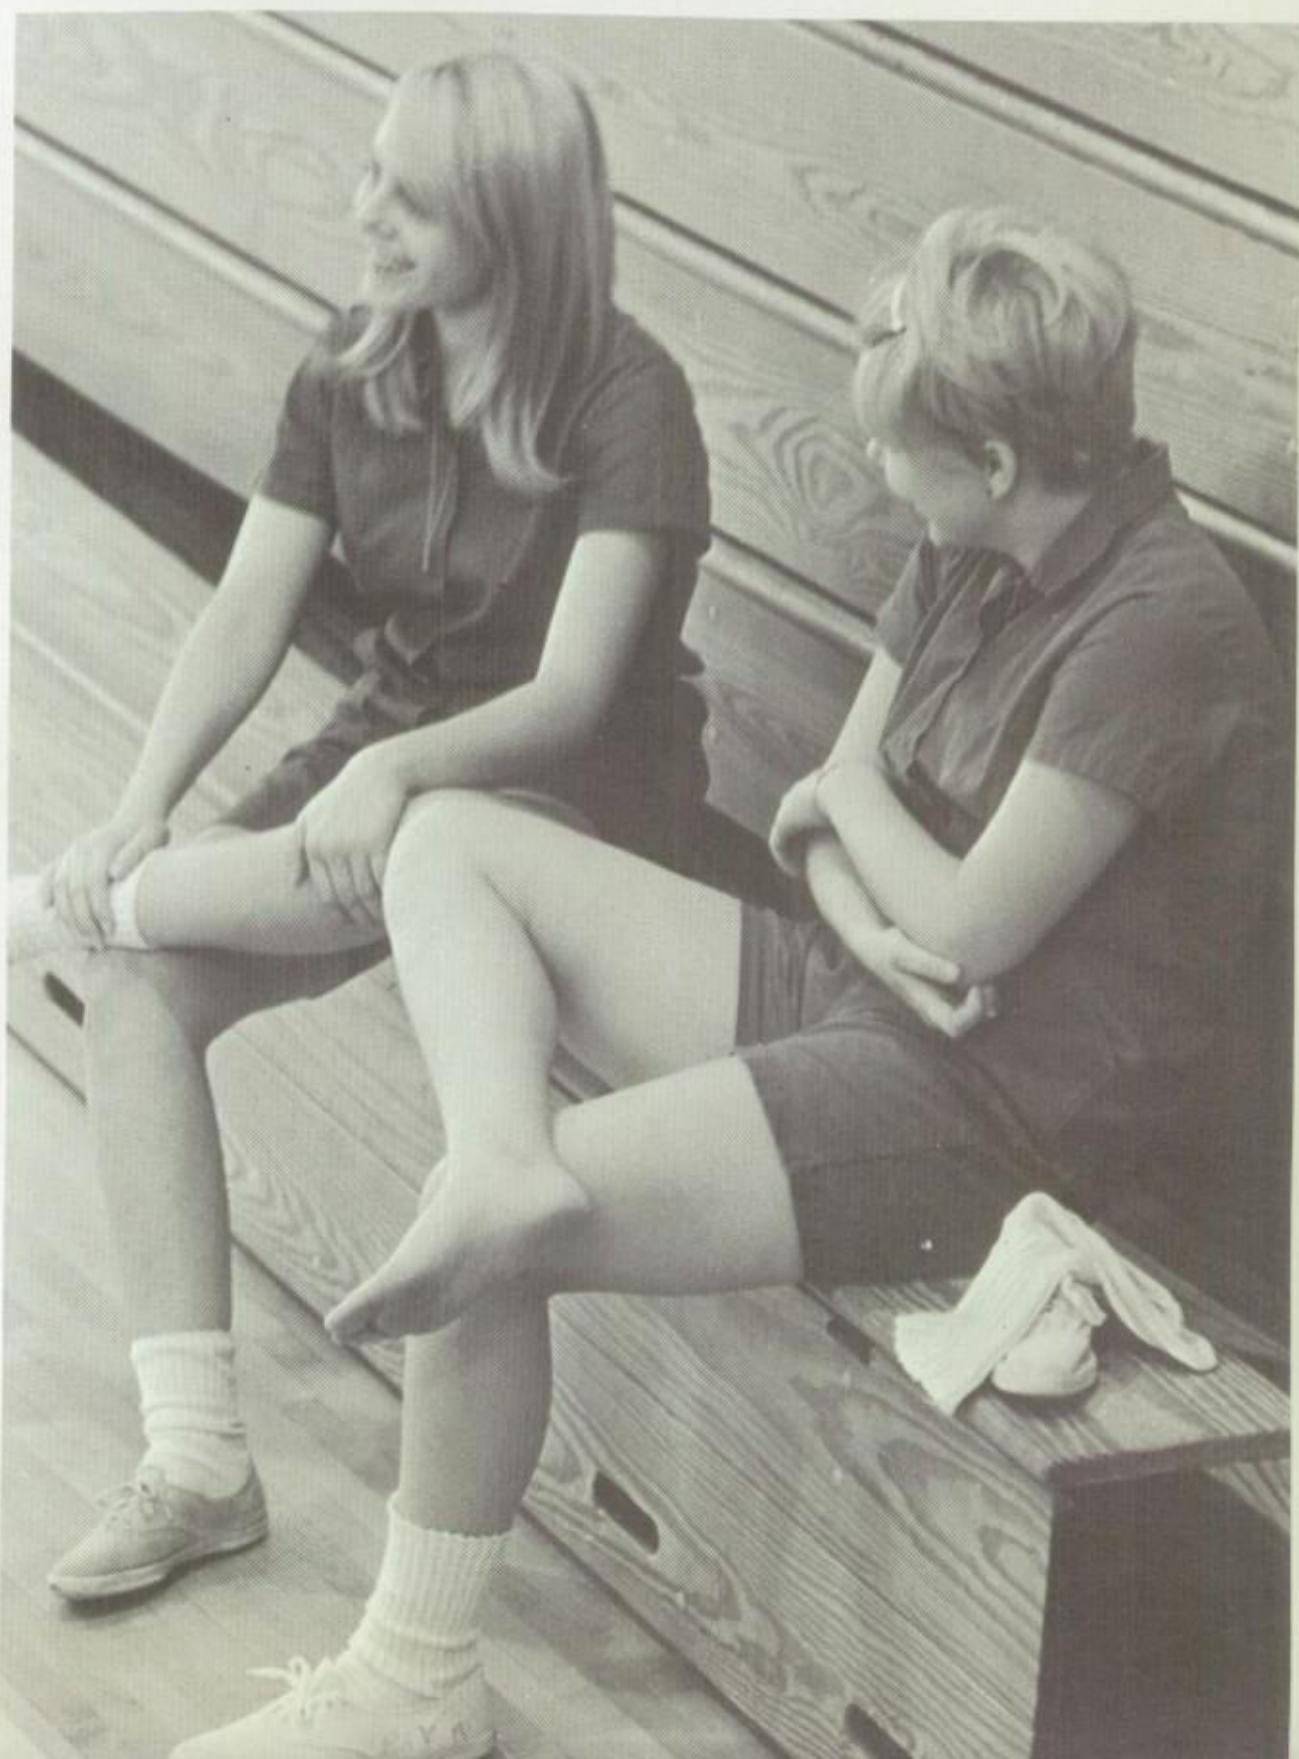

Belinda
 s' been nice

Sometimes alone—but more often associating . . . needing others . . .

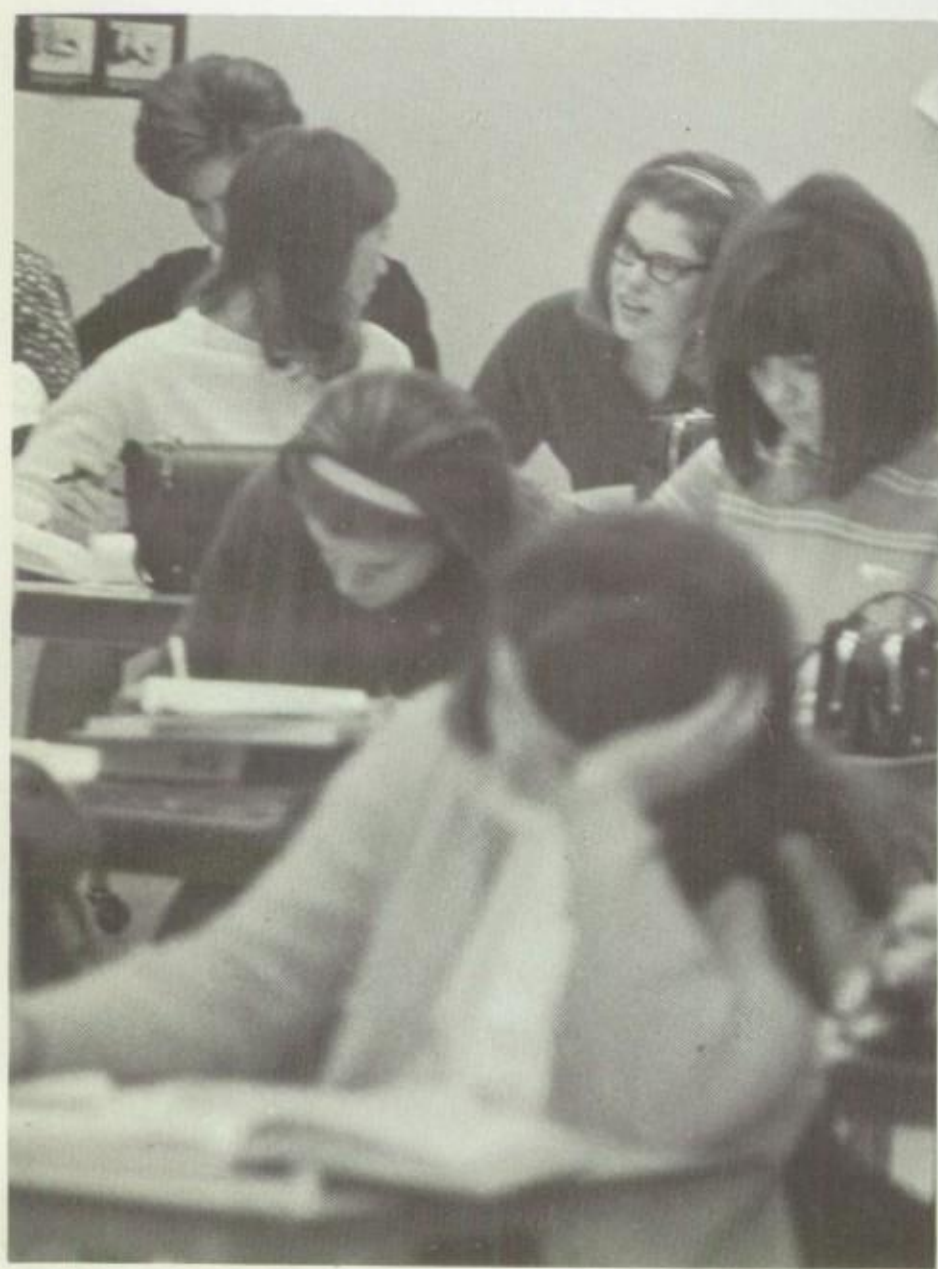

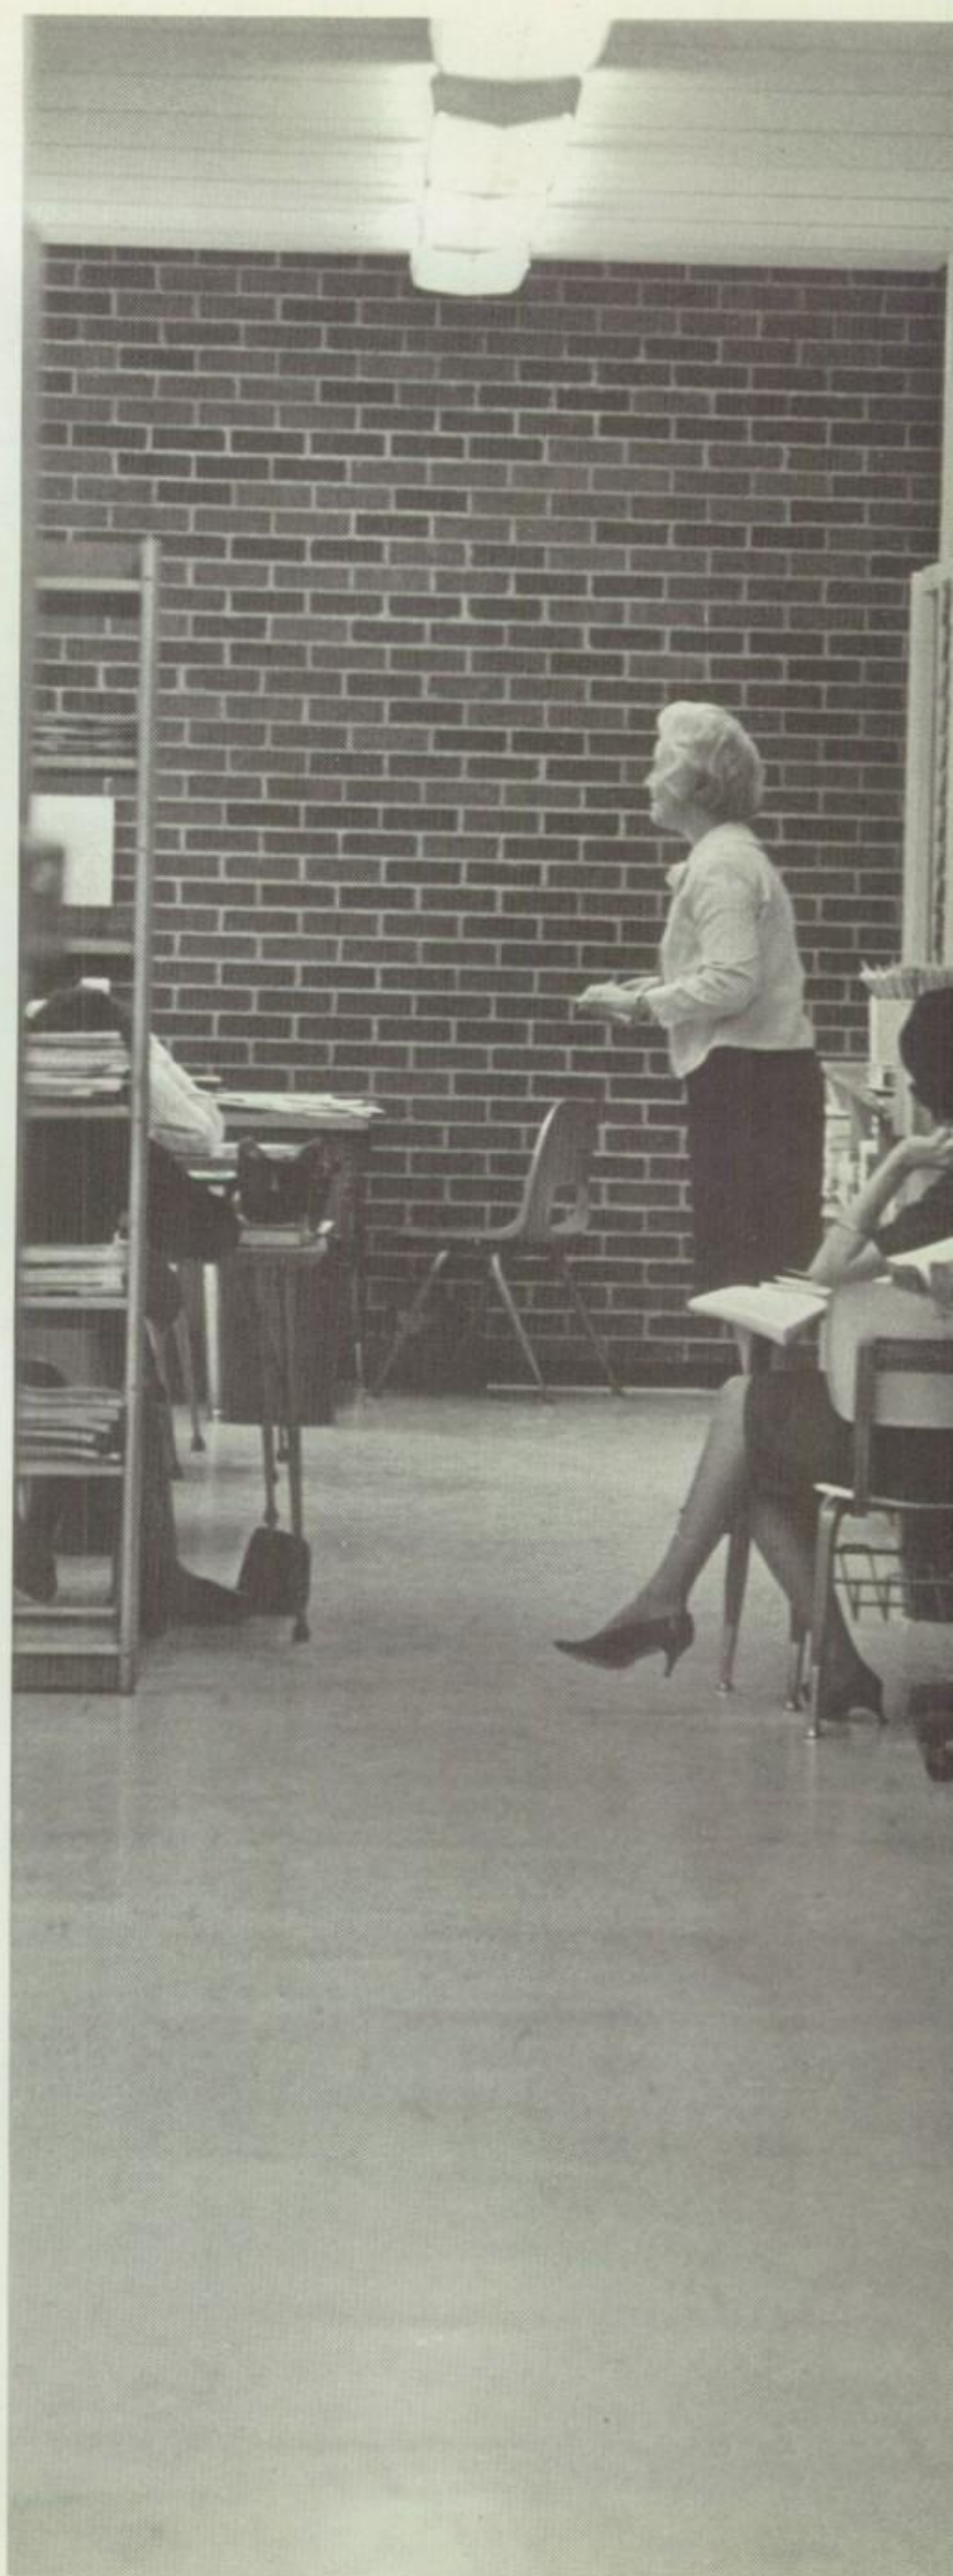

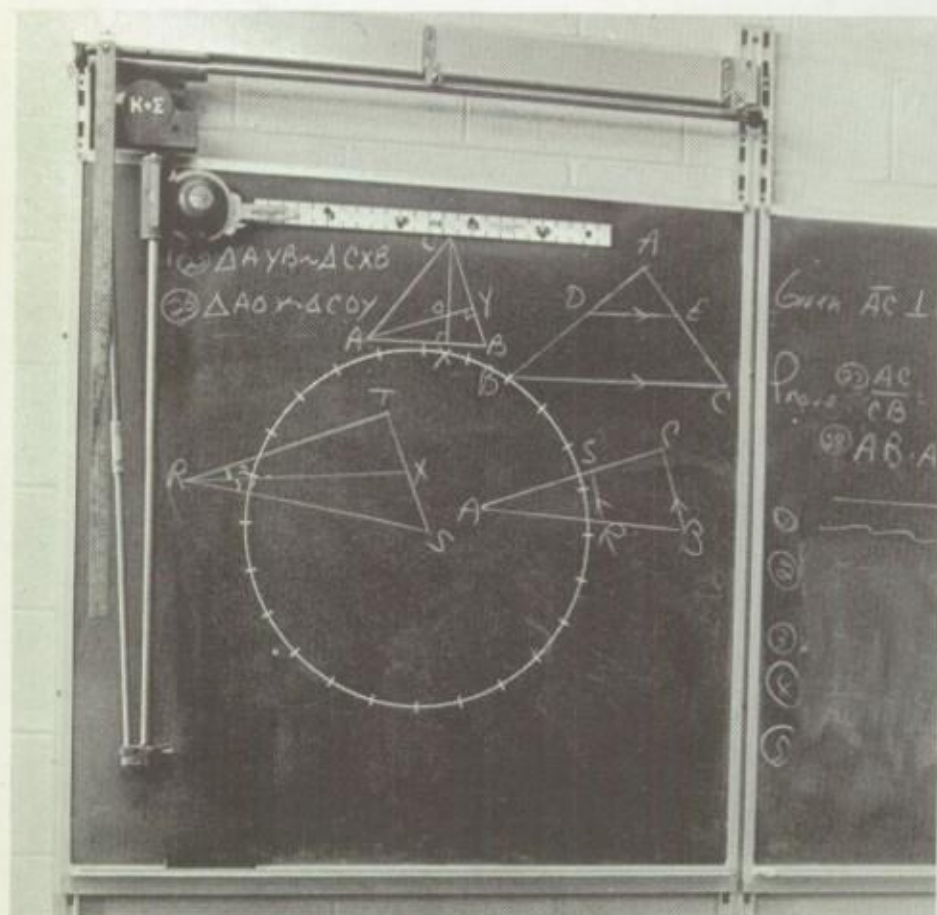

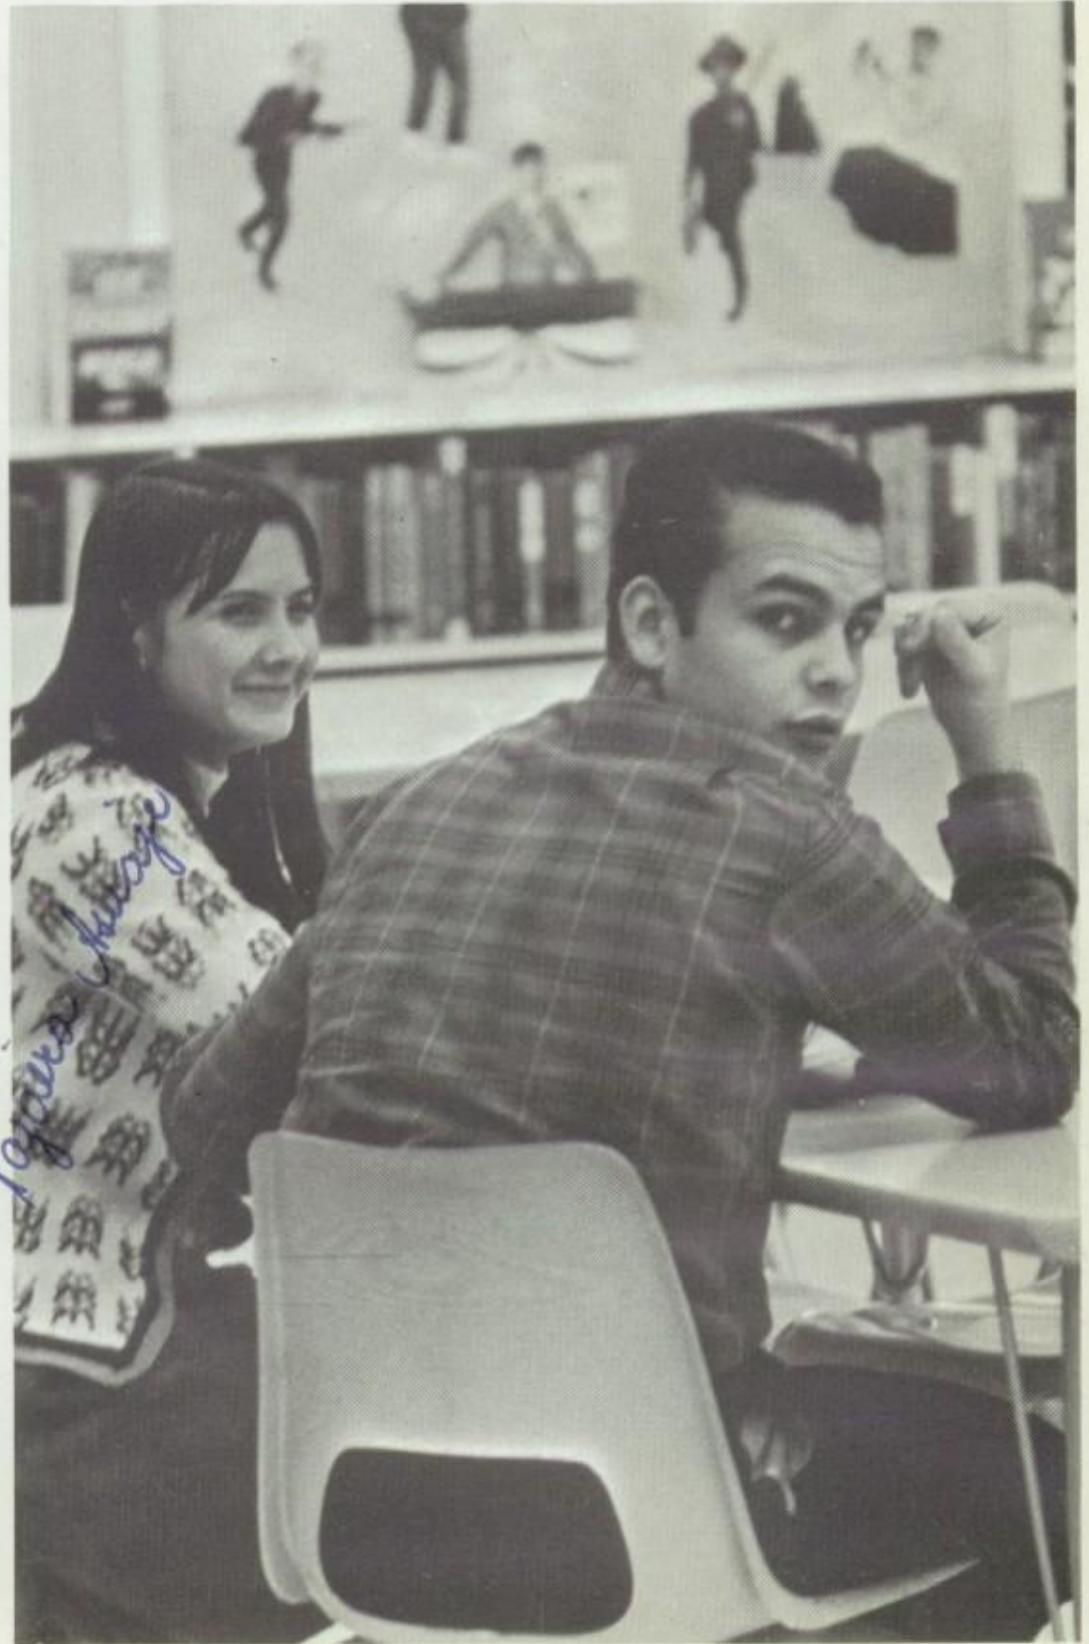

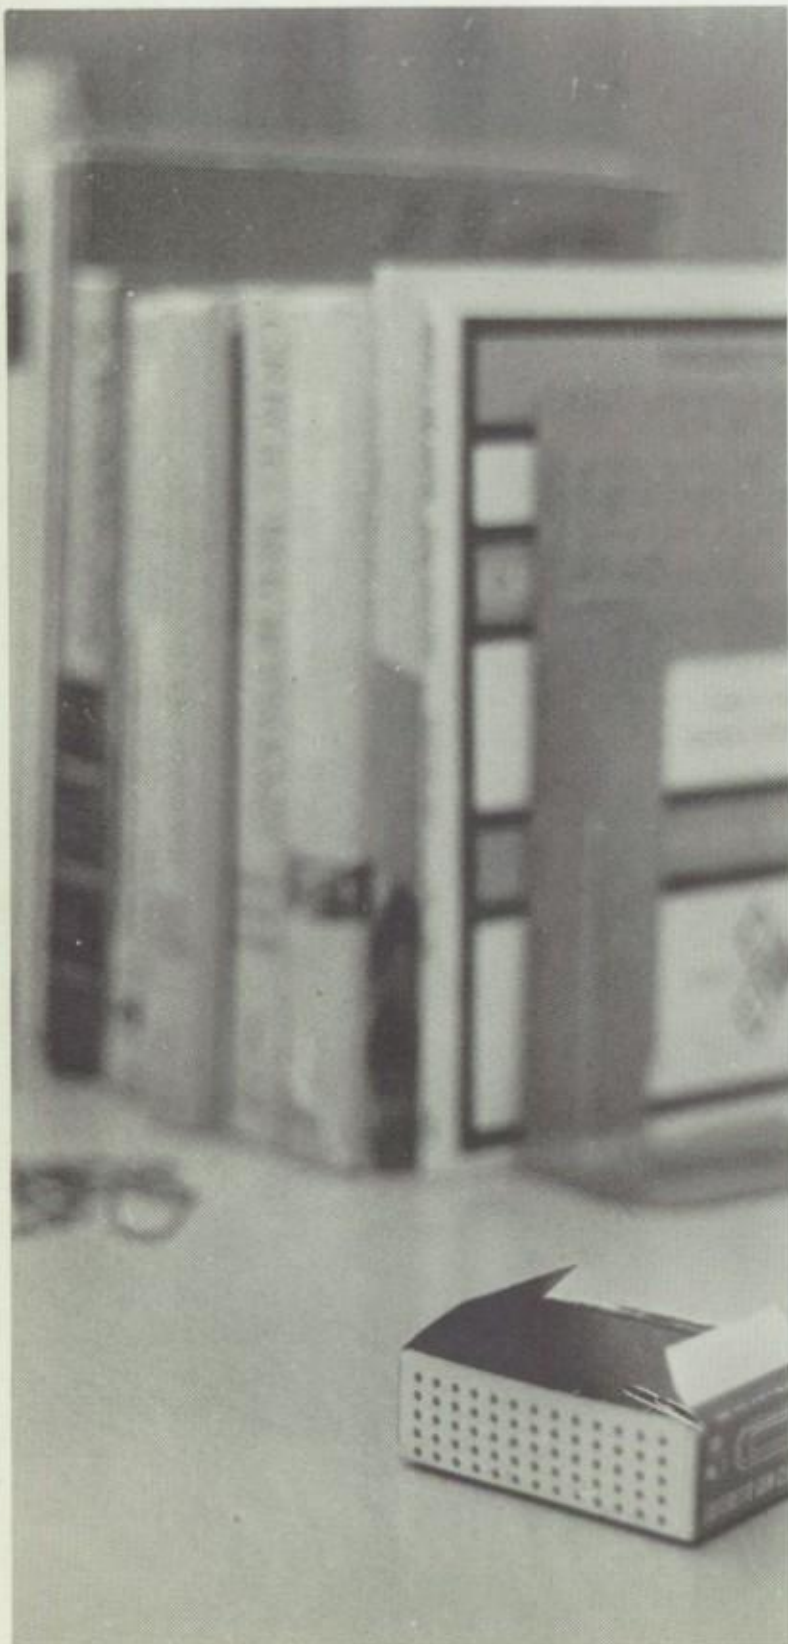

Moments of concentration, stimulation, tension . . . the serious gave way to release, fun—the lighter side . . .

Not always smooth—disappointment sometimes prevailed . . . straining, studying, worrying—trying but sometimes falling short . . .

*Brenda.
 It has been nice
 knowing you this year.
 You are a real analyzer.
 Good luck in the future.

Senior class—center of the school—for its members the year was magic—each moment an unforgettable part of youth—its completion bringing fulfillment . . . they have found the meaning of ambition—part of the long search everyone goes through to find his own purpose, the part that only seniors can grasp . . . senior spirit has something of a unity that cannot be boxed—caring about school without really knowing why except that it has become a part of them . . . at the year's closing, all of the little things—otherwise insignificant—are noticed perhaps just because these things won't always be with them . . . decisions have been made, opinions formed, many have found things they've wanted and have worked for these things . . . as the wheel turns full-round, graduation is here—an end and a beginning in one . . .

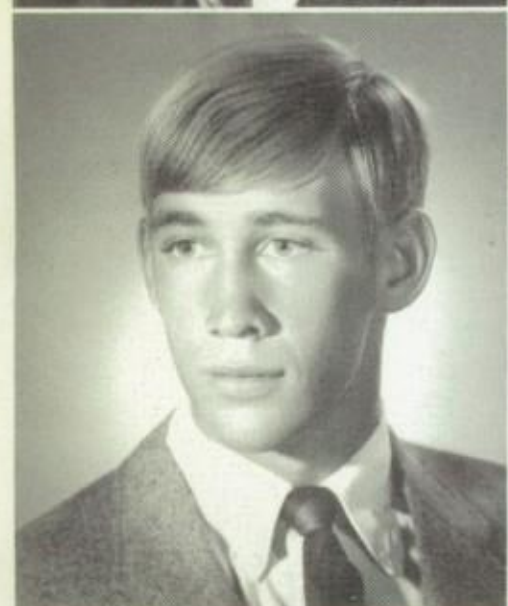

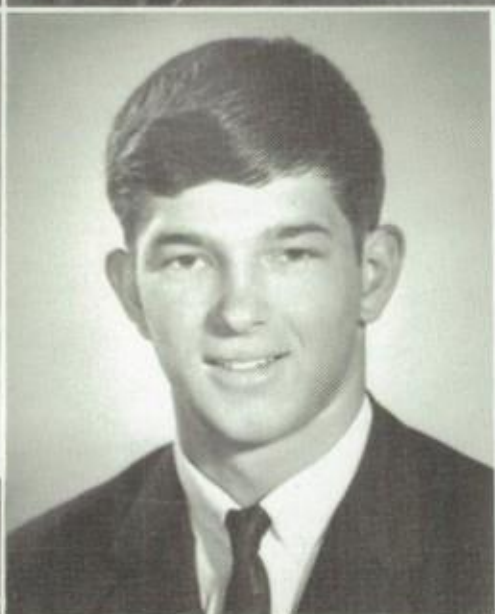

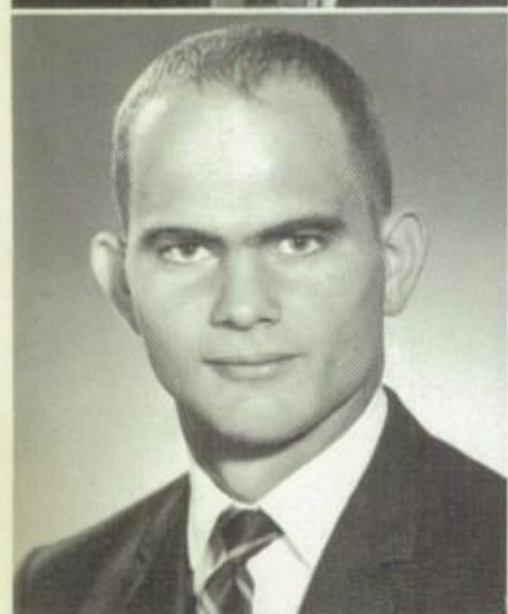

1. Elected to serve as the senior class officers were the following people: Bill Granstaff, president; Chris Covey, vice-president; Connie Burk, secretary; and Mary Salmon, treasurer. 2. Juniors

Having passed the unstable months of firsts, juniors have not yet reached the goal of their efforts . . . no longer wanting to watch things go by, but rather to participate with every part of themselves—they build a strong background on which to go on . . . individuality comes and some begin to distinguish themselves . . . given work to do that belongs to no one else—juniors struggle with the prom, trying to please, wanting the best, proving to us what they can do . . . too old to ignore the questioned but too young for serious reflection—juniors are caught in the middle . . .

The class of 1969 chose their class officers to be John Potts, president; James Moore, vice-president; Patty McCreary, secretary; and Jana Taggart, treasurer.

Wanting to prove themselves, to accept any challenge, to have the satisfaction of doing something well—our teams, working together for one goal and either winning or losing still achieving . . . SPORTS make a boy a man . . .

Blenda Linder

Blenda,
you are an extremely nice girl, so be careful. It is hard to say anything when you are writing on paper, so you will have to just figure out what I am trying to say. You are an extremely good friend of mine. I only wish that I knew you a little better. Just because this is the end of school is no sign that you will not see me again. I will be around some and I will look you up. If you ever need me for any-

1. John Miller as Homer Smith in "The Lillies of the Field" plays for the Nuns after their evening meal; 2. Father Gomez, played by Jim Dorough, speaks of God in "The Lillies of the Field"; 3. In "The Acting Lesson," Chip Cooper, Chris Friesen, and Jane Wilson portray children under the instruction of Jan Buck; 4. Under the direction of Mrs. Betty Perkins and Bob Plank, the cast of John Miller, Linda Kinkade, Jan Buck, Linda Vaughan, Jane Wilson, Edith Heaton, Jim Dorough, Jim Grimsley, and Chip Cooper practices "The Lillies of the Field," for presentation in March.

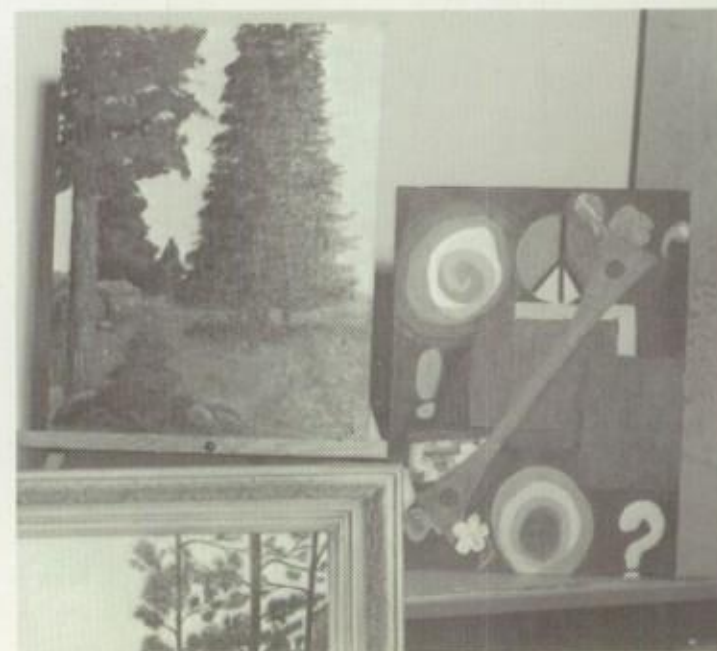

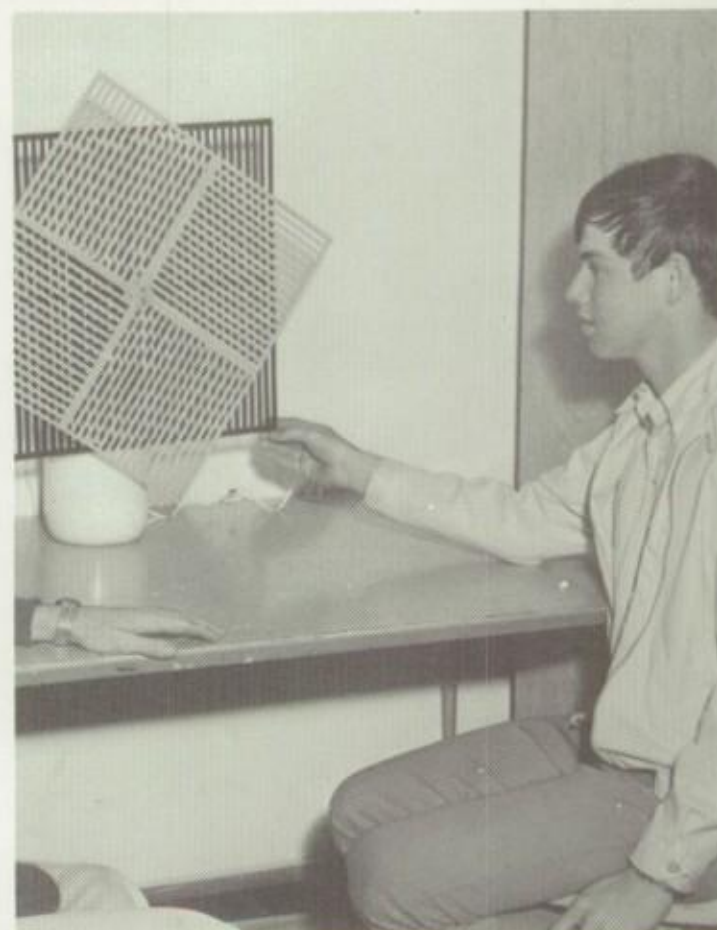

"Impromptu," "The Hitchhiker," "The Acting Lesson"—three one act plays began this year's speech activities . . . one of them, "The Acting Lesson" placed first at the Shawnee tournament enabling it to compete at regional contests . . . this year's speech department competed in contests in Oklahoma City, Weatherford, Edmond, Tahlequah, and in regional and state contests . . . this year's spring production was "Lilies of the Field" . . .

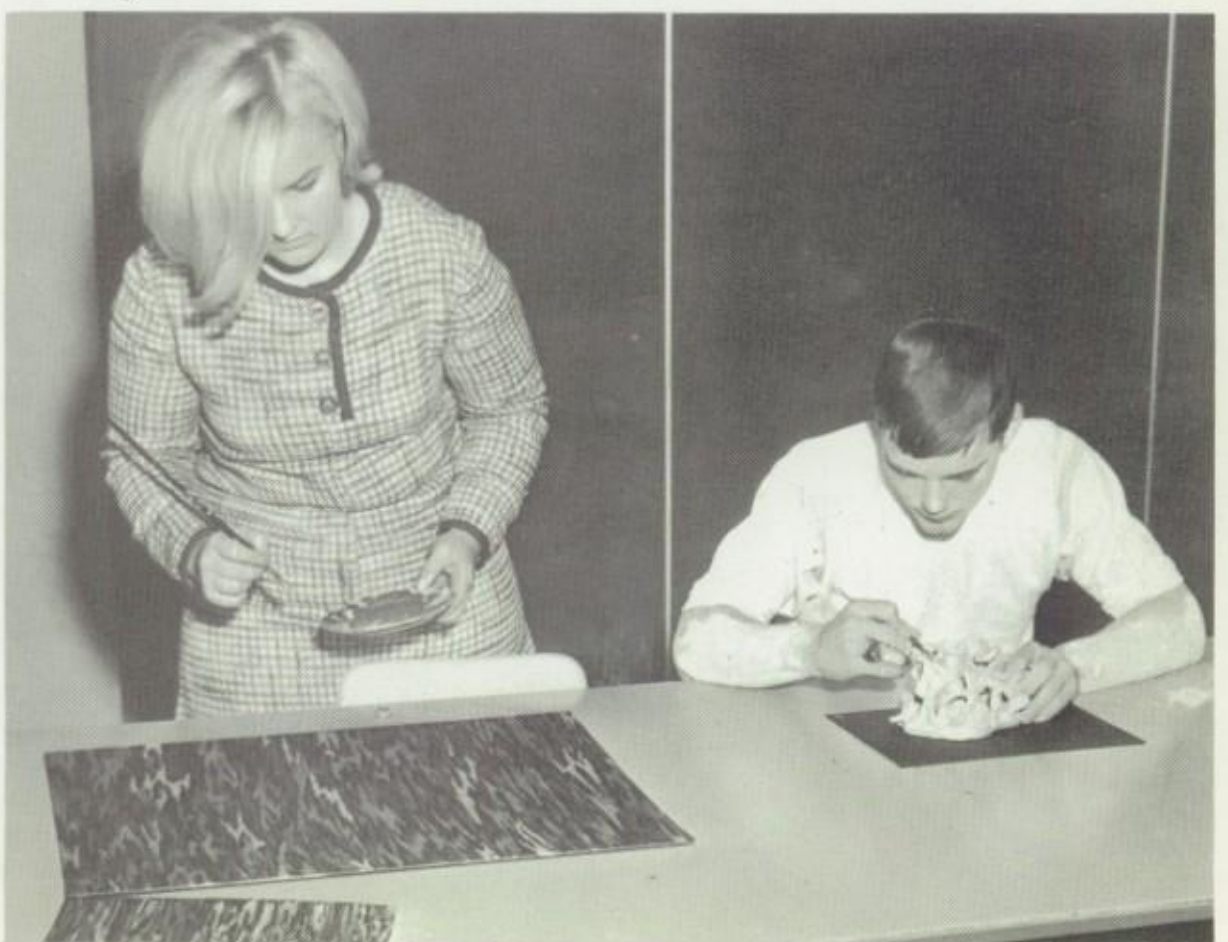

Lillies

1. Art I students practice still life in tempera painting. 2. Kinetic art interests Roy Sharpton, Art III. 3. Vicki Van Hook's landscape and Cheryl Arwine's abstract are displayed in the art room. 4. Art II works in water colors. 5. Mrs. Betty Fryrear helps Lee Walden with his painting in hyplar. 6. In class Margie Schroeder creates a painting in hyplar and Darrell Domnick sculptures in clay.

Talent—time—a willingness to apply one's skills—a student ventures into art . . . in the three years that a student may take art, he begins with the basics—drawing and shading, color and design, still life painting with tempera . . . he then begins to experiment with different art media, trying his hand at illustrating poems and stories, or maybe designing an album cover . . . later he is ready to develop his own ideas in paintings, drawings, and sculptures—always stressing creativeness and originality and learning professional techniques and attitudes . . . throughout the year students worked to complete at least one item to be displayed at the annual art show at C.E. Donart . . . in the spring of the year the art department had entries in the Young Talent in Oklahoma Show, a contest noted for its stiff competition . . .

Curriculum

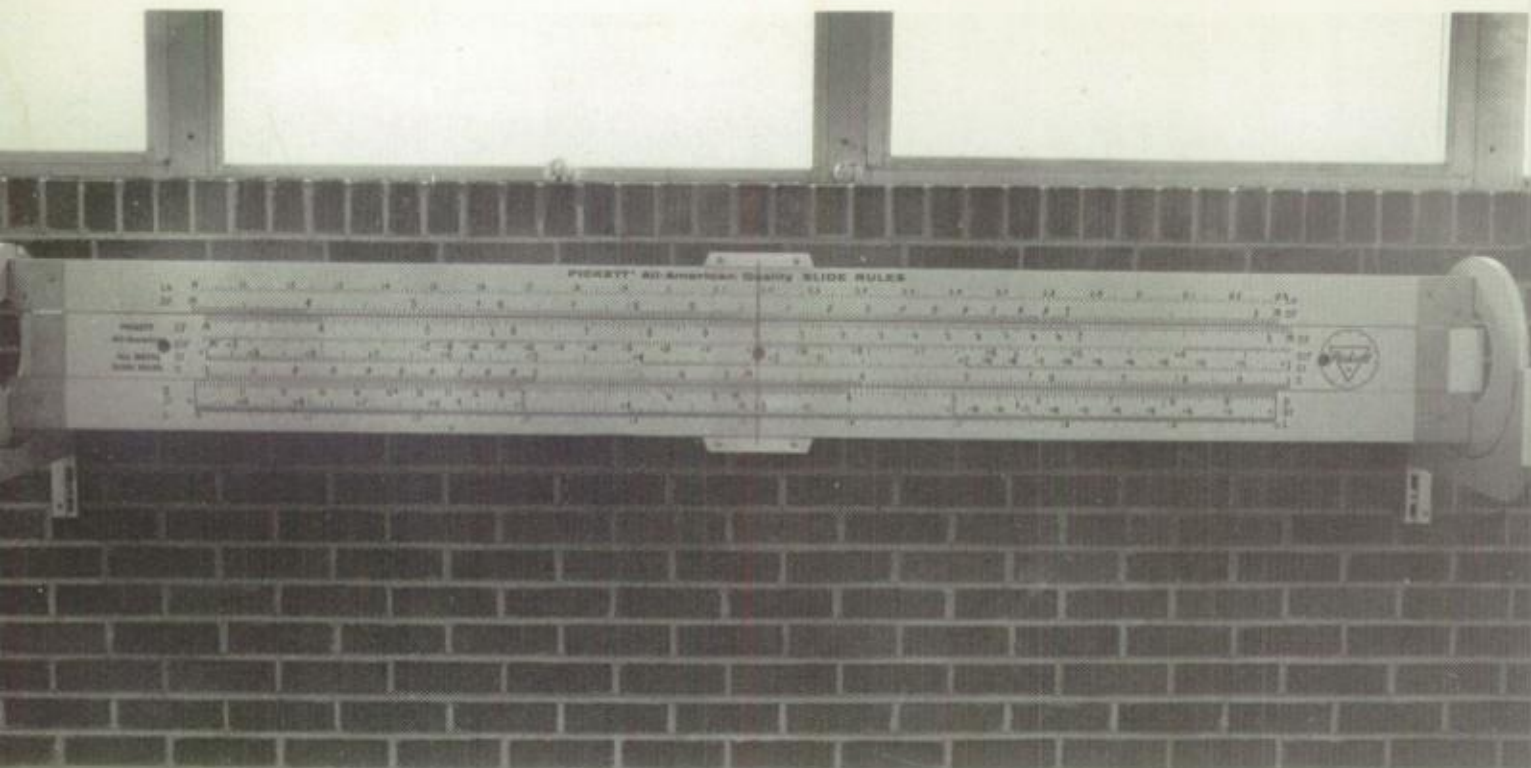

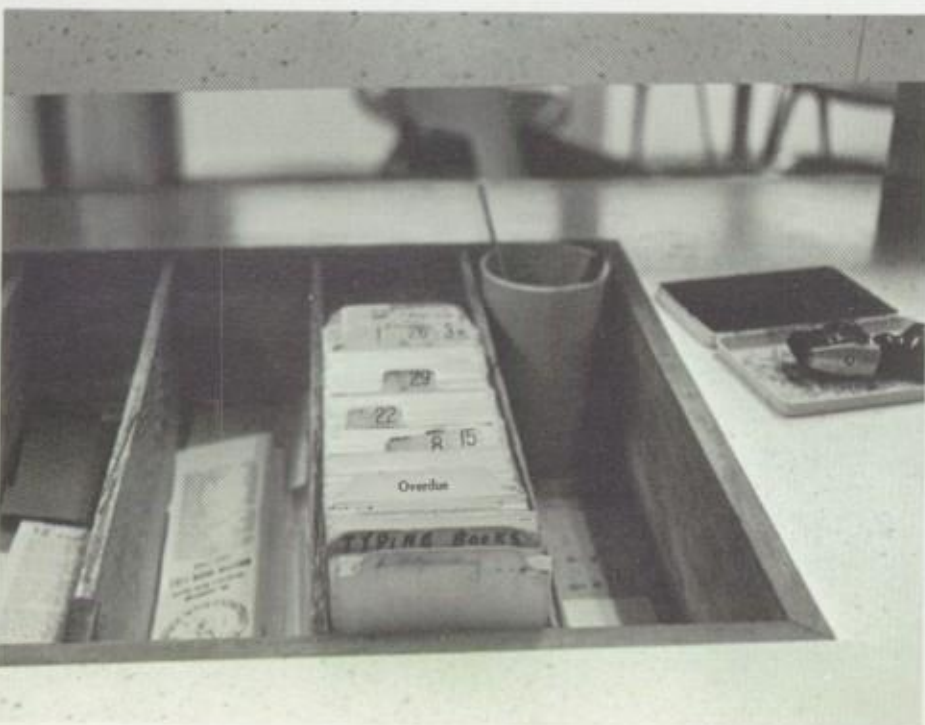

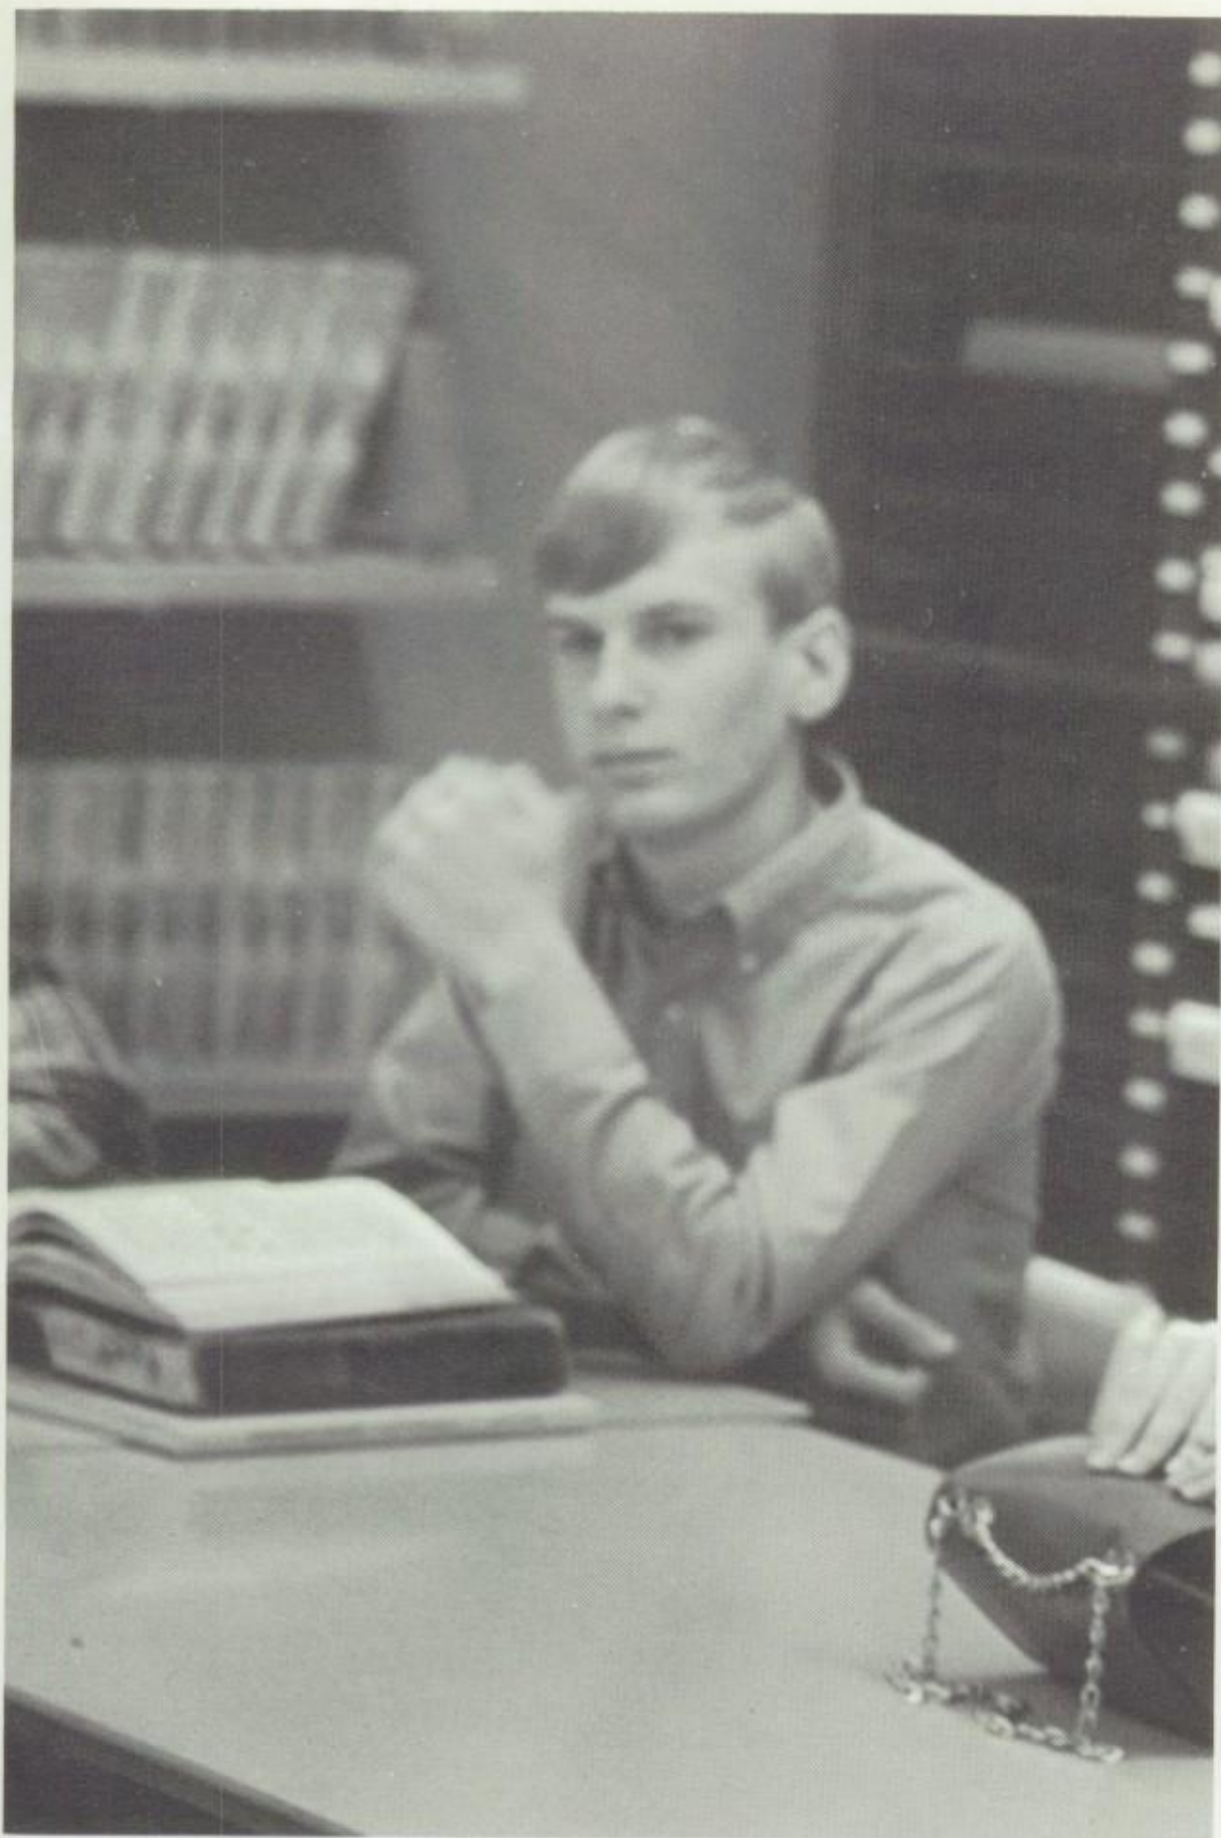

Spotting only a moment out of the year's span of time—we see uniqueness in even the ordinary and realize the fulfillment of discovering, exploring, reflecting, and finally accomplishing . . . these moments come once and then are gone, but not before they instill in us a sense of pride for things we have done . . .

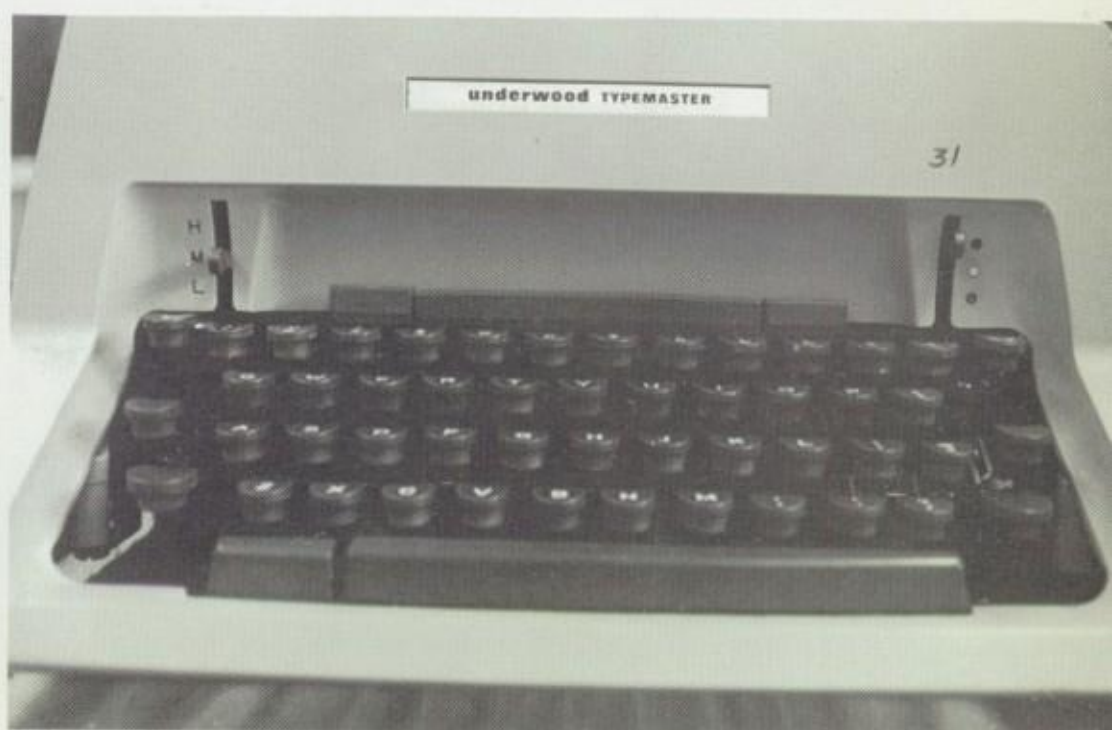

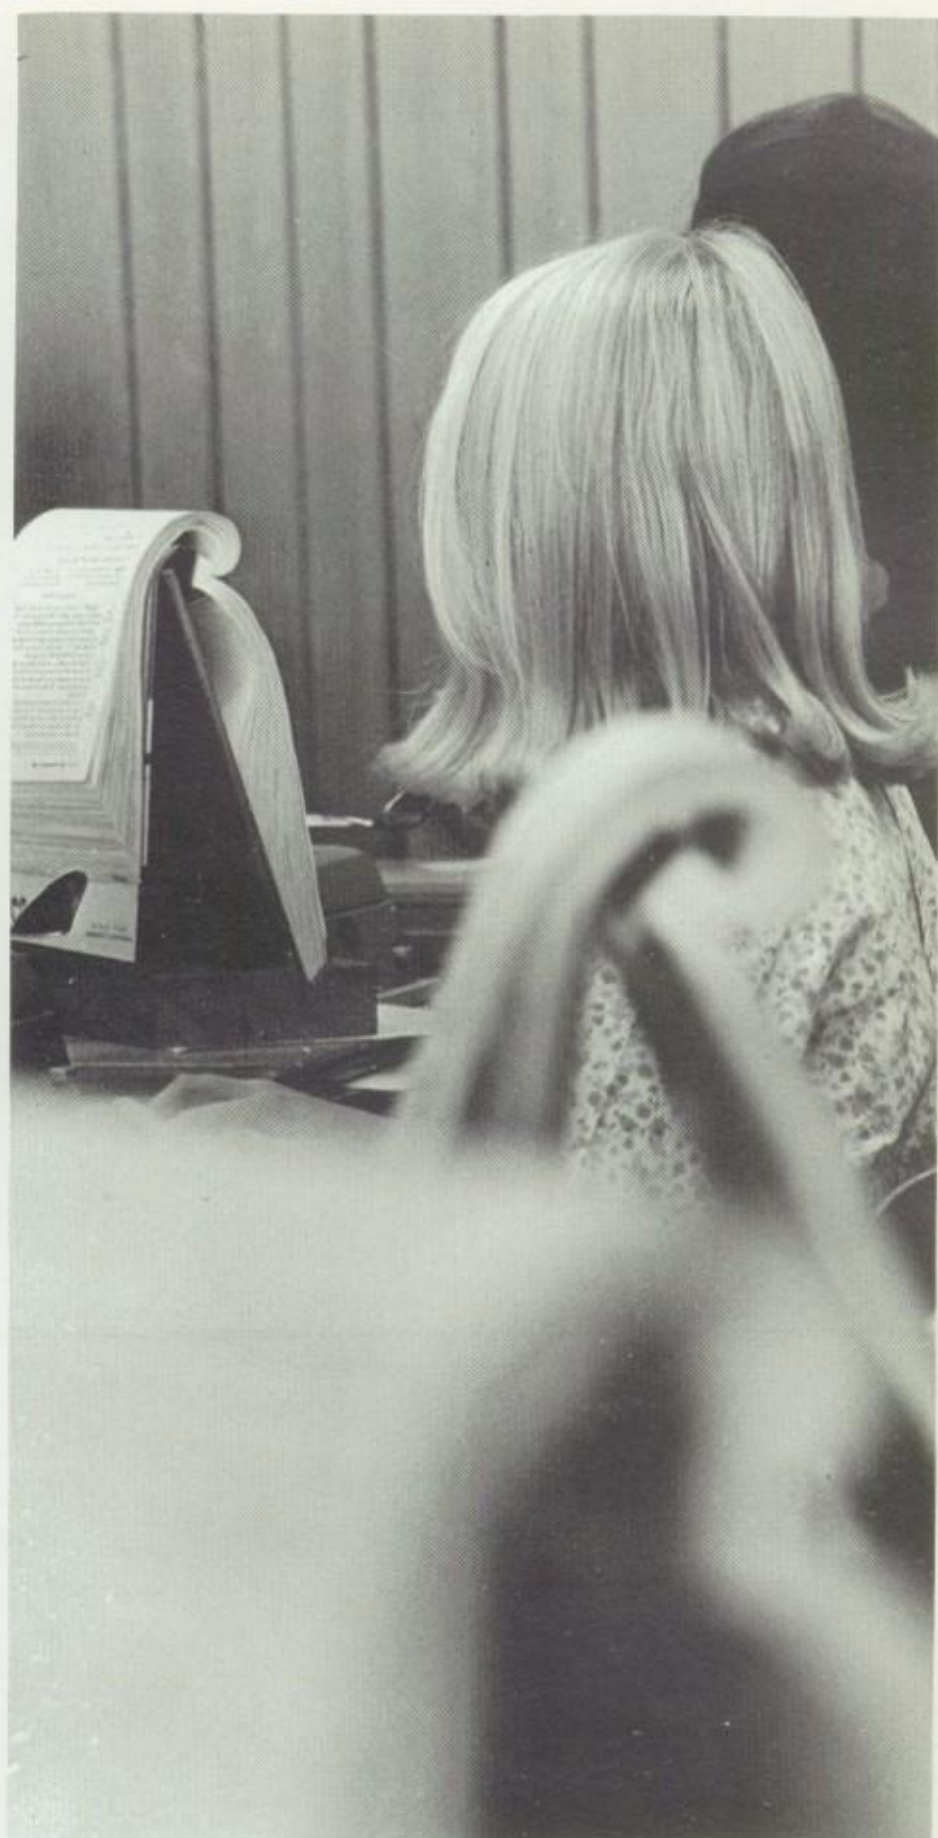

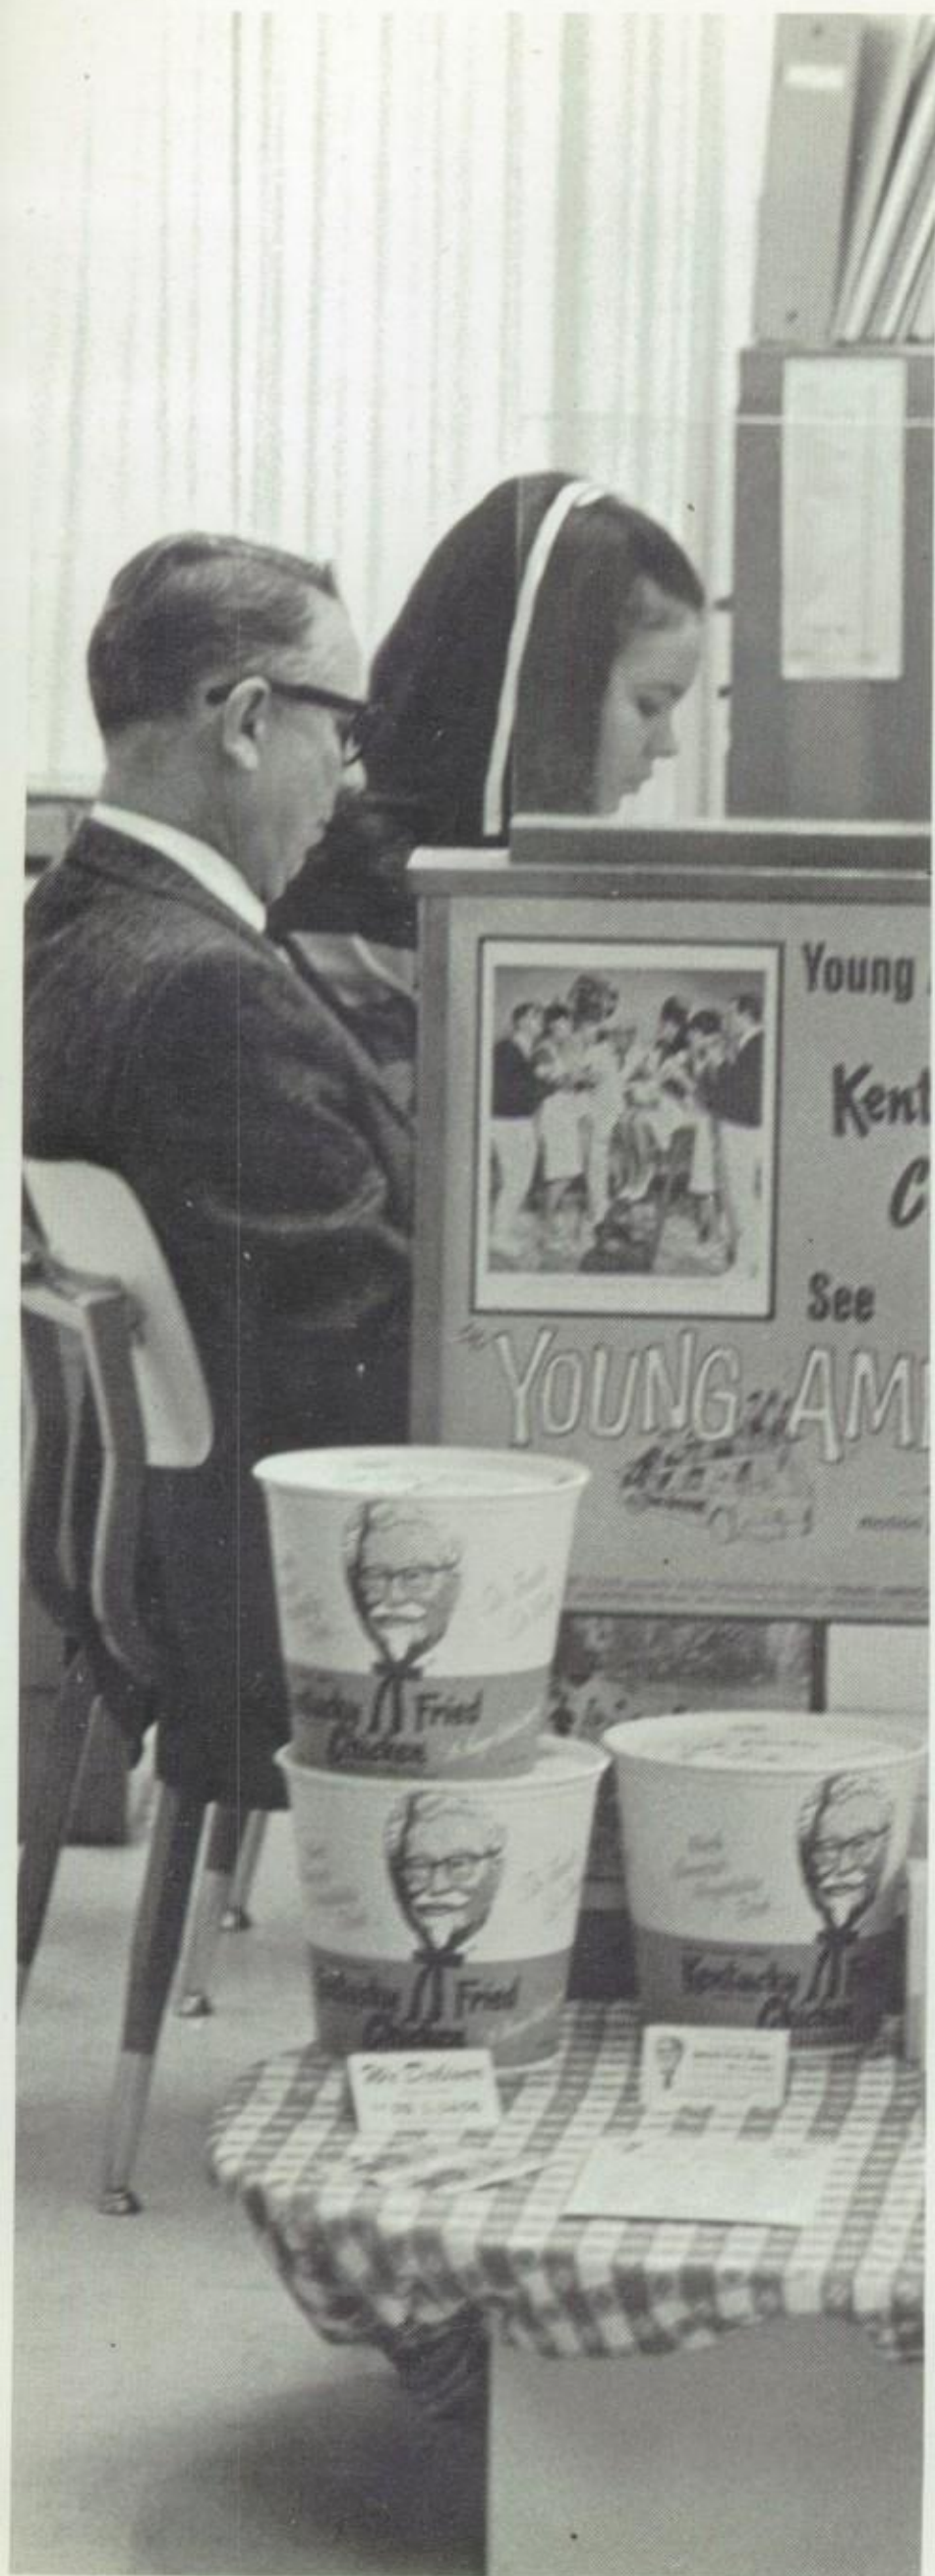

Curriculum

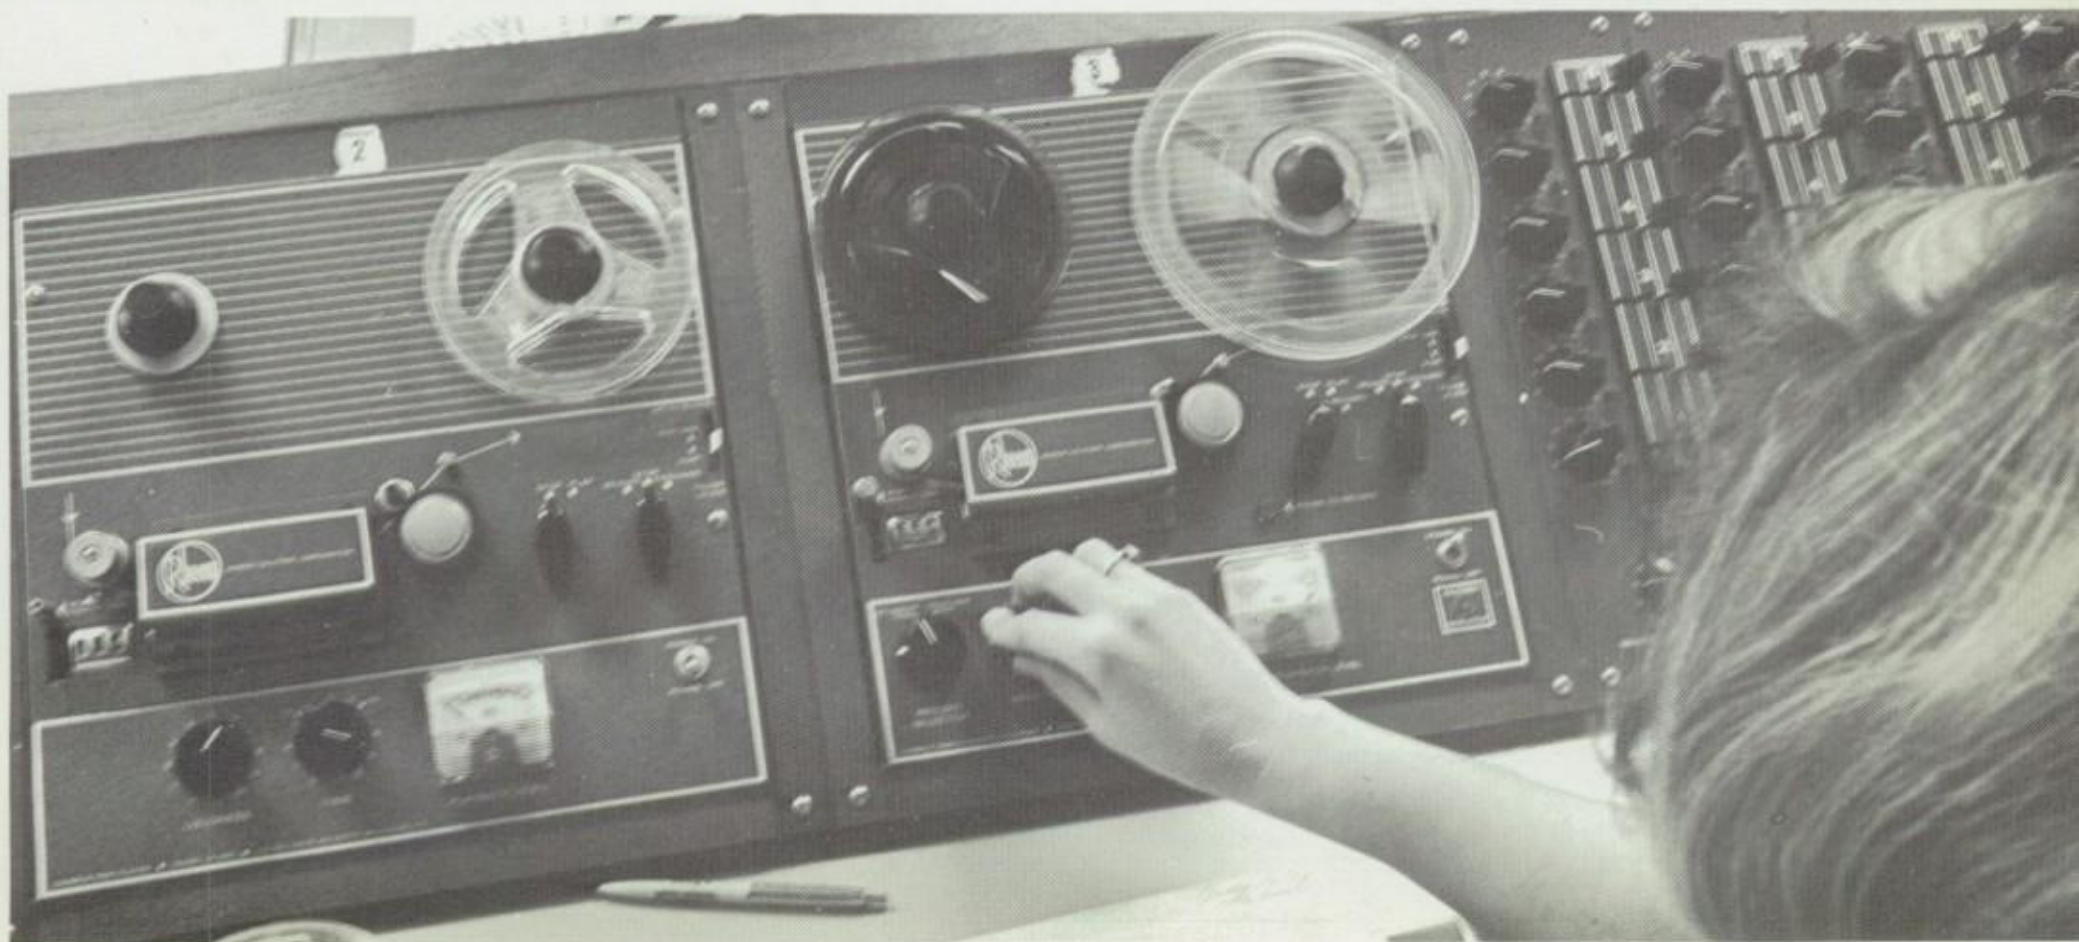

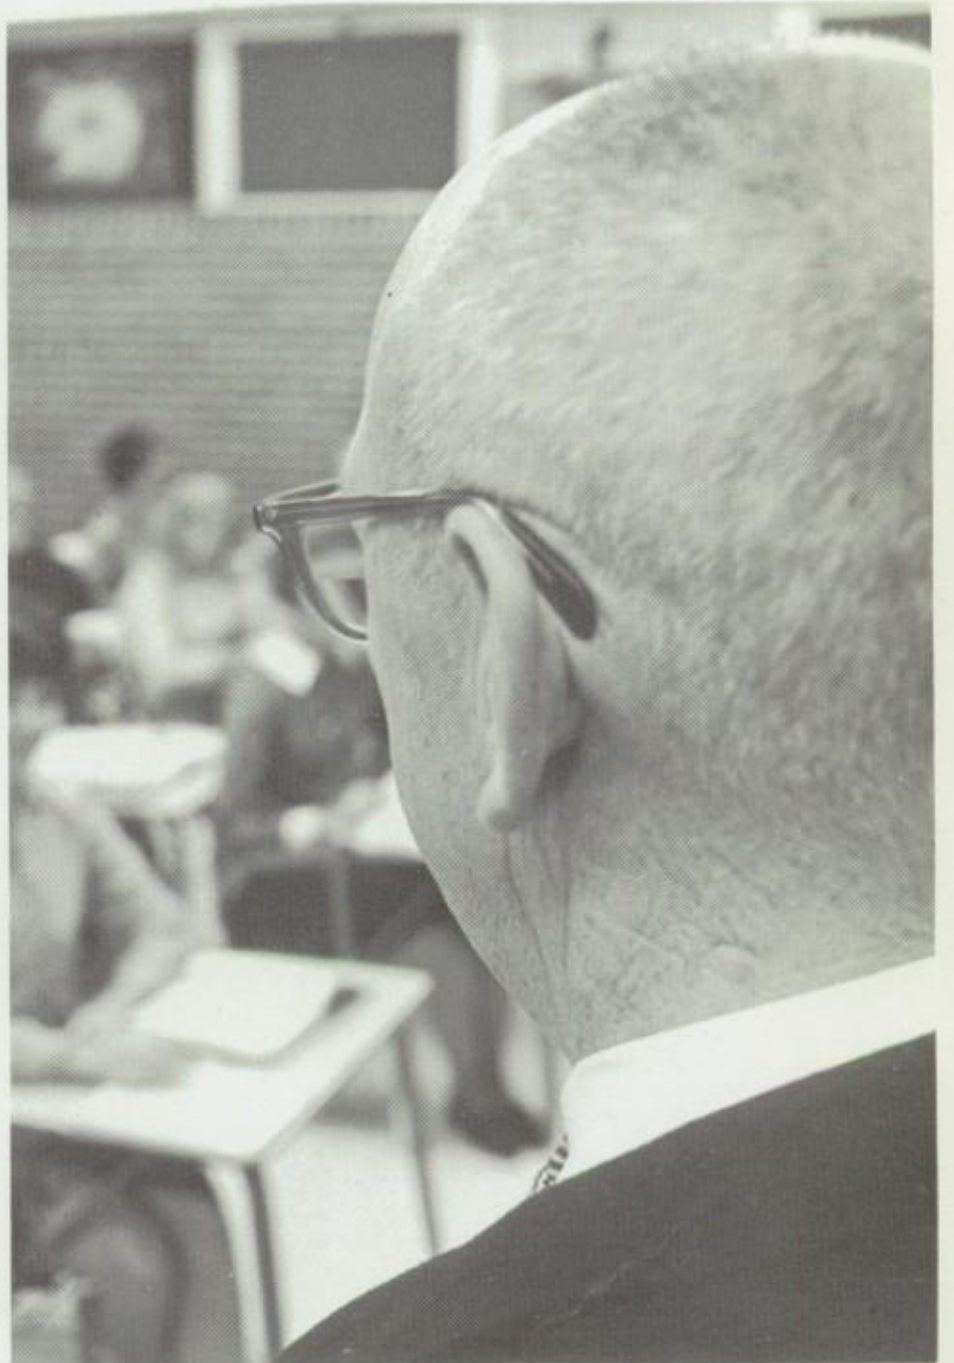

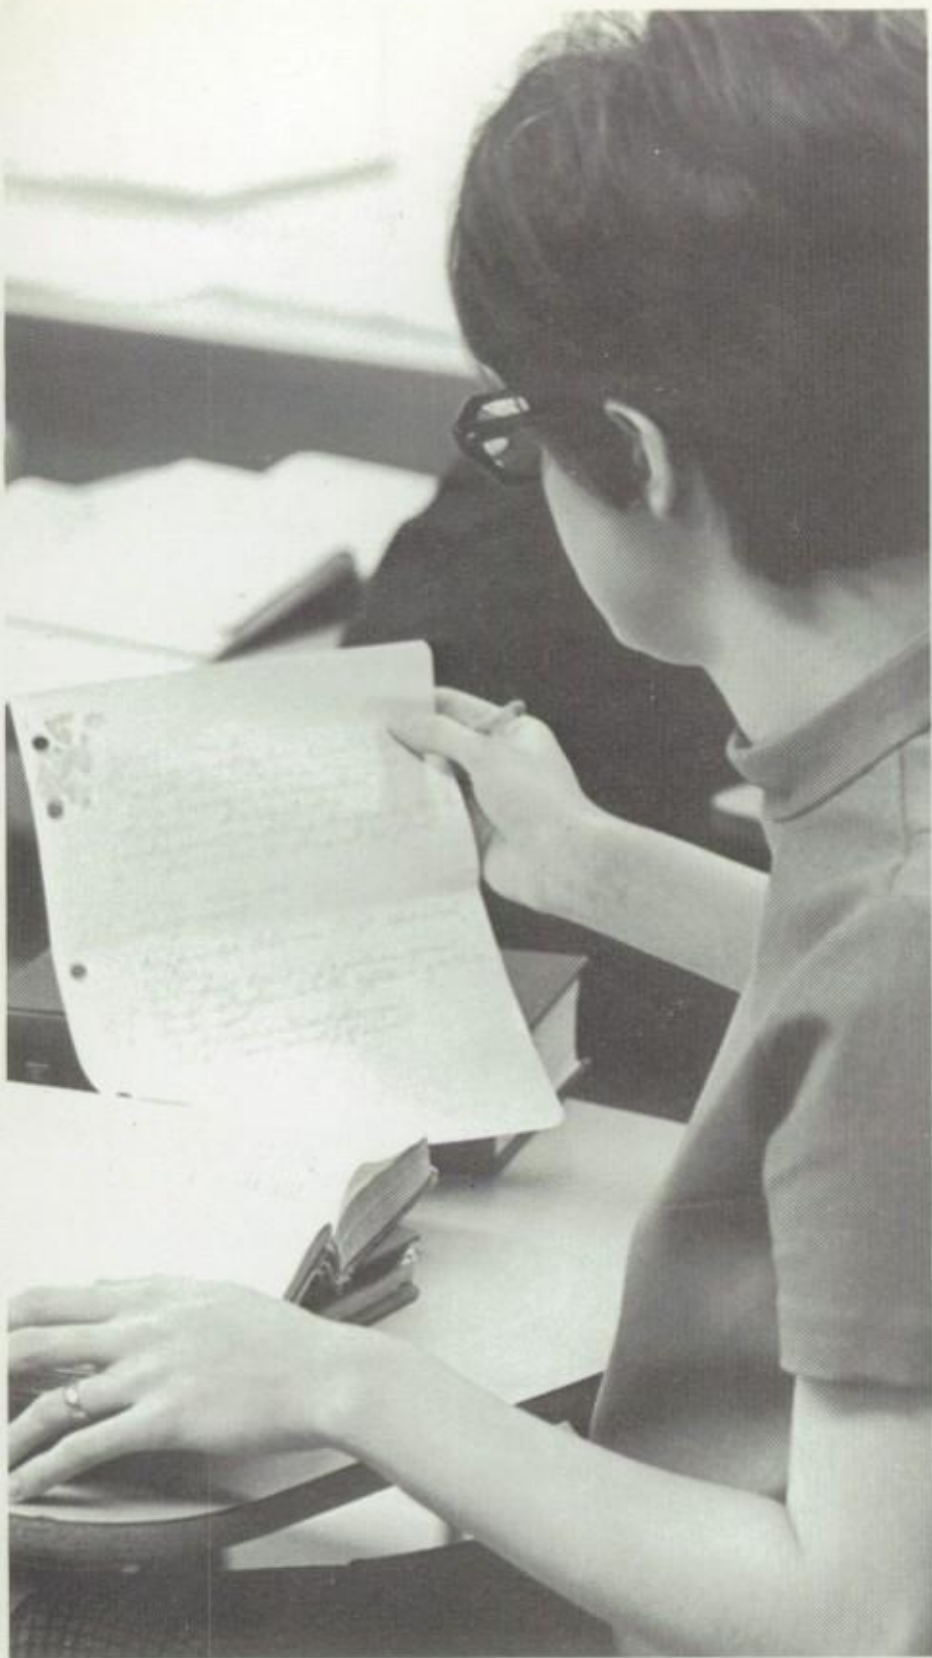

Publications

We look around and know that events must be recorded, things recognized, some kind of a summary of happenings must be produced—important things cannot go by unnoticed . . . we try then to capture the action, the emotion, the mood of each week of the year in symbols-pictures and words . . . we find that this is not easy . . . we struggle to co-operate and aim for the ultimate goal of pleasing varied tastes . . . hours of work go into expected publications—deadlines come up and are met again and again . . . the work is hectic, exasperating, tiring—staff members find themselves faced with constant decisions and problems . . . but at the same time, there is the excitement, the challenge, the feeling of doing a vital something well—which makes the difficulties seem obscure and the mind restless—ready to search farther . . .

It is over—a span of months containing both harmony and dissonance—but time doesn't stop to pick us up . . . we are again carried along in the swift current of happenings . . . questions in our minds have been answered . . . we have submitted and found how to come out ahead . . . involvement taught us to be useful—to be sensitive to the values of others . . . striving for accomplishments—we found the more we gave, the more was given back to us . . . individuality—we recognized faults and discovered talents . . . wanting—we learned the feel of possession . . . things mattered to us—for no realm was offered to the passive or indifferent . . . but still the questionable is before us . . . our search of ourselves has only begun . . . our paths will separate and cross . . . nothing is definite but we have the assurance that limits are only in the mind . . . there are no walls to crowd our advancement . . . challenge, freedom, improvement—the unknown beckons us . . . this is what it's all about . . .
